Existing View

This viewpoint is on the boundary of Maen Hir South 'B' and is representative of motorists using the unclassified lane to the north of Capel Coch. Sustrans National Cycle Route 5 (NCR 5) also follows this unclassified lane. To the left, the foreground of the view comprises the rural lane and its verges which stretches into the midground view. The rural lane is bordered by cloddiau to the left and drystone walling with stock proof fencing to the right. Some properties on the northern edge of Capel Coch are visible next to the rural lane. The foreground of the view to the right of the lane comprises a large pastoral field, beyond which more geometric pastoral fields can be seen on gently rolling topography. The 400kV pylons and transmission lines and two turbines are prominent on the skyline. The right of the view is dominated by St Michael's Church with the drystone wall stretching to the midground, behind which the church itself can be seen, in addition to vegetation in the churchyard, which largely screens views to the north.

Operation Phase

Maen Hir South 'B' would be visible at close proximity beyond the roadside boundary. Field 192 forms much of the foreground and midground view. To the left of the view, Field 196 (mitigation and enhancement area) can be seen beyond a line of hedgerow trees. To the centre of the view, Field 193 and 194 can be seen prominently to the back of the midground view. Beyond this hedgeline, there may be some glimpsed long-distance views of the south-western area of Maen Hir South 'B'. To the right of the view, there are oblique views of Field 191 in the midground view, but it will be largely screened by intervening topography. During the operation phase, the scale of effects are likely to be Large (adverse) scale reducing to Medium (adverse) once the embedded mitigation has established.
